WM. E. PEDERSEN

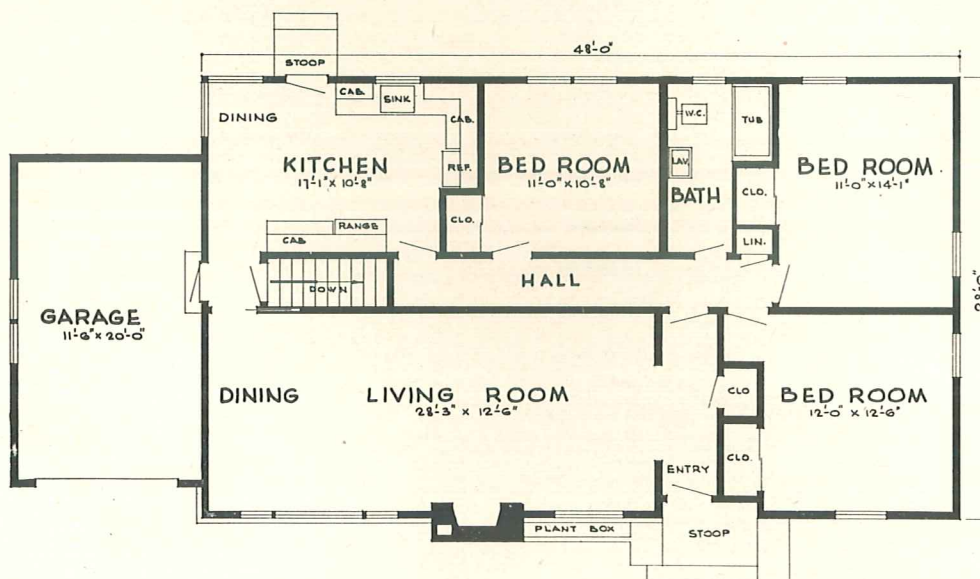

210 Globe Building

St. Paul 1, Minn., U. S. A.

Glenbrook

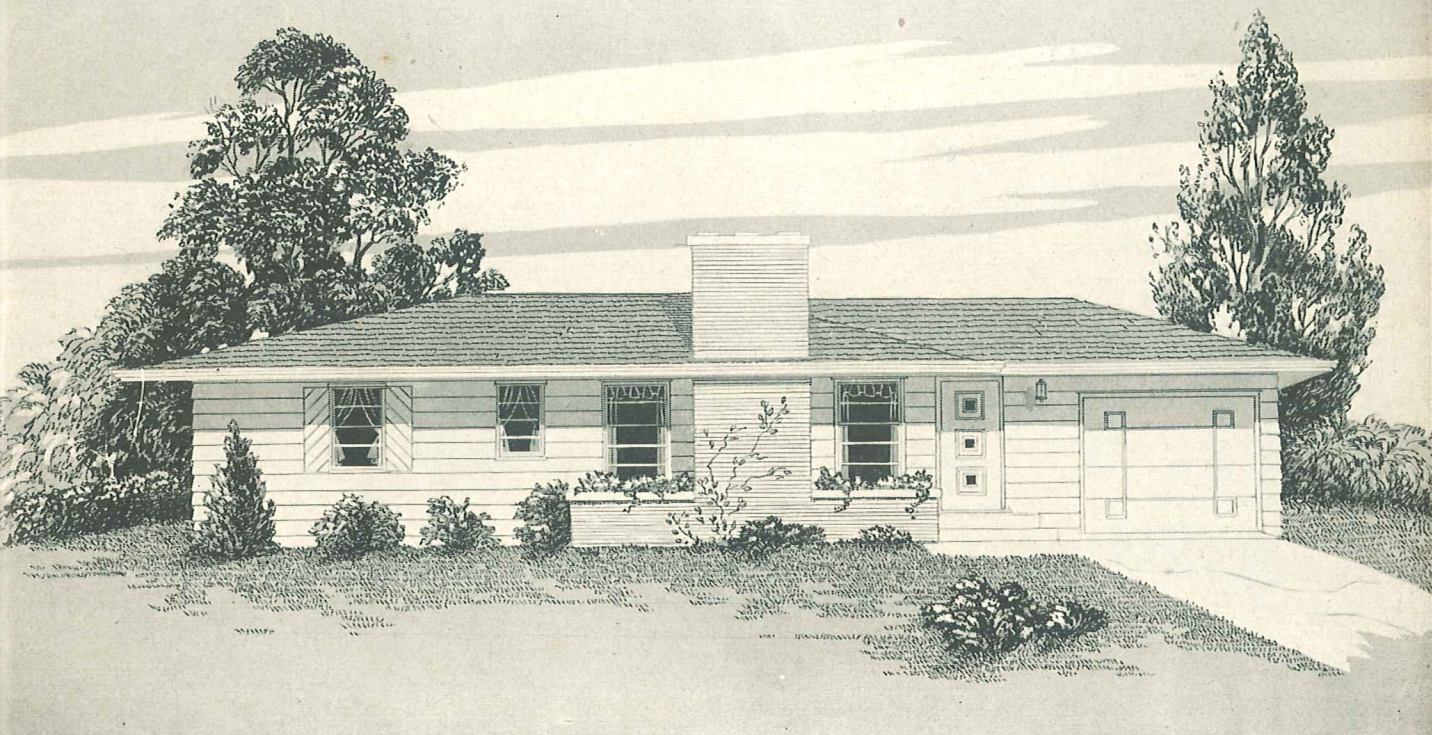

THIS exceptional house has features of good planning that would please the most critical. Traffic through the living and dining area is completely eliminated by the well arranged halls that offer direct passage to kitchen, bedrooms and bath. The kitchen is large enough for all family dining. The low rambling features of this clean cut design surely award it—"The house that has everything."

Thornton

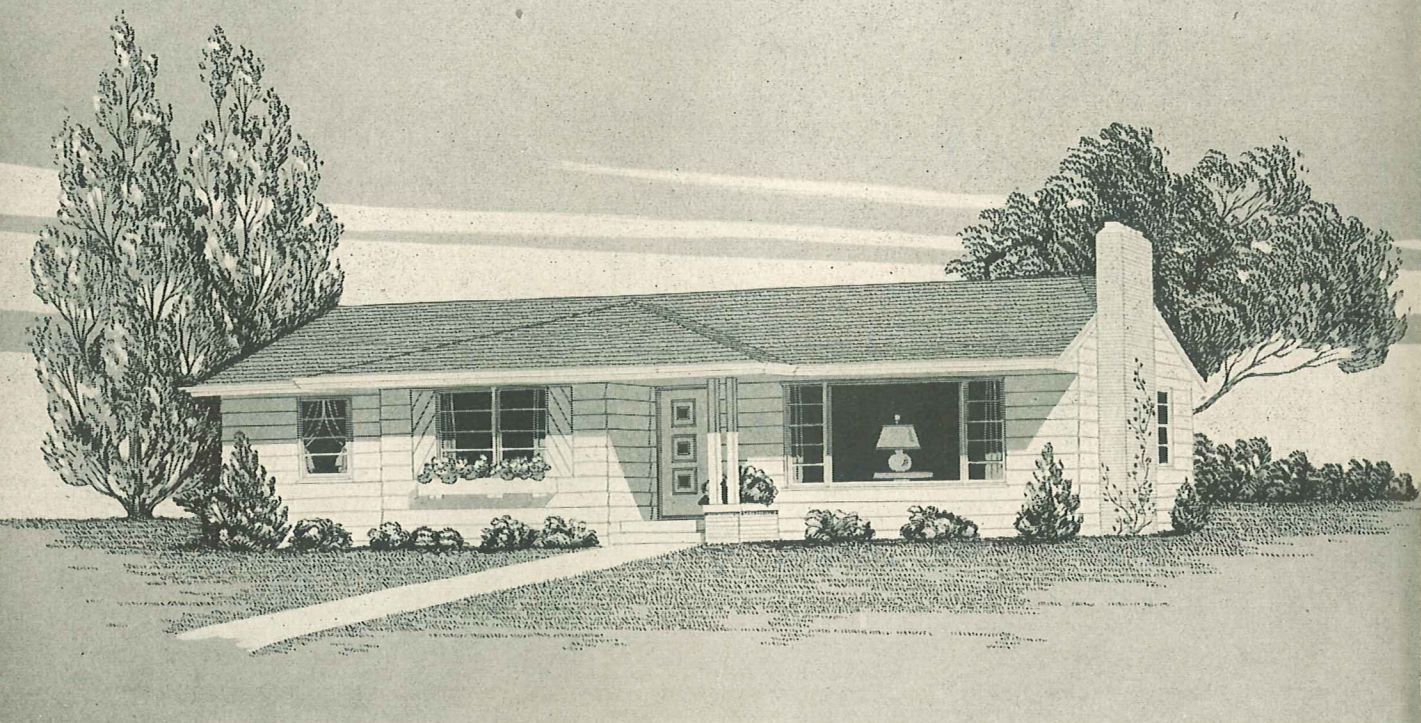

THE sweeping lines of this beautifully proportioned house with its broad chimney and flanking plant boxes should be a proud possession of any homeowner. The direct access from kitchen to front door is a step-saver for the busy housewife. This plan provides large bedrooms and closets, with a minimum of hall space. The attached garage is another feature of convenience.

Carlton

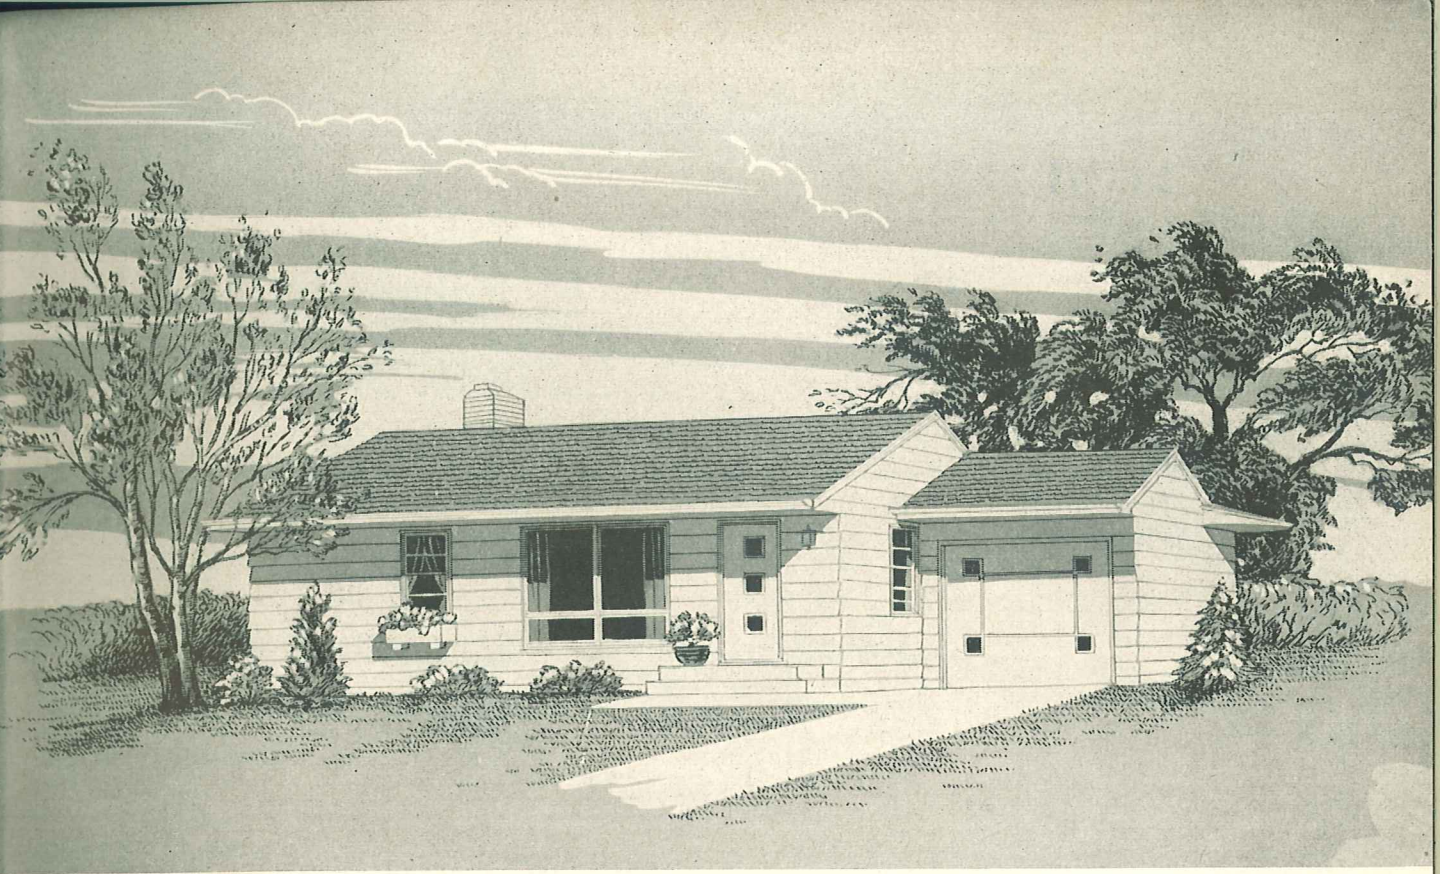

THIS home with its quiet charm was carefully planned for livability. The sleeping areas are removed from the more active living area, with the interior arranged for an easy flow from one room to another. Large living room windows allow plenty of light and make this plan particularly suitable to a lot with a view.

Blake

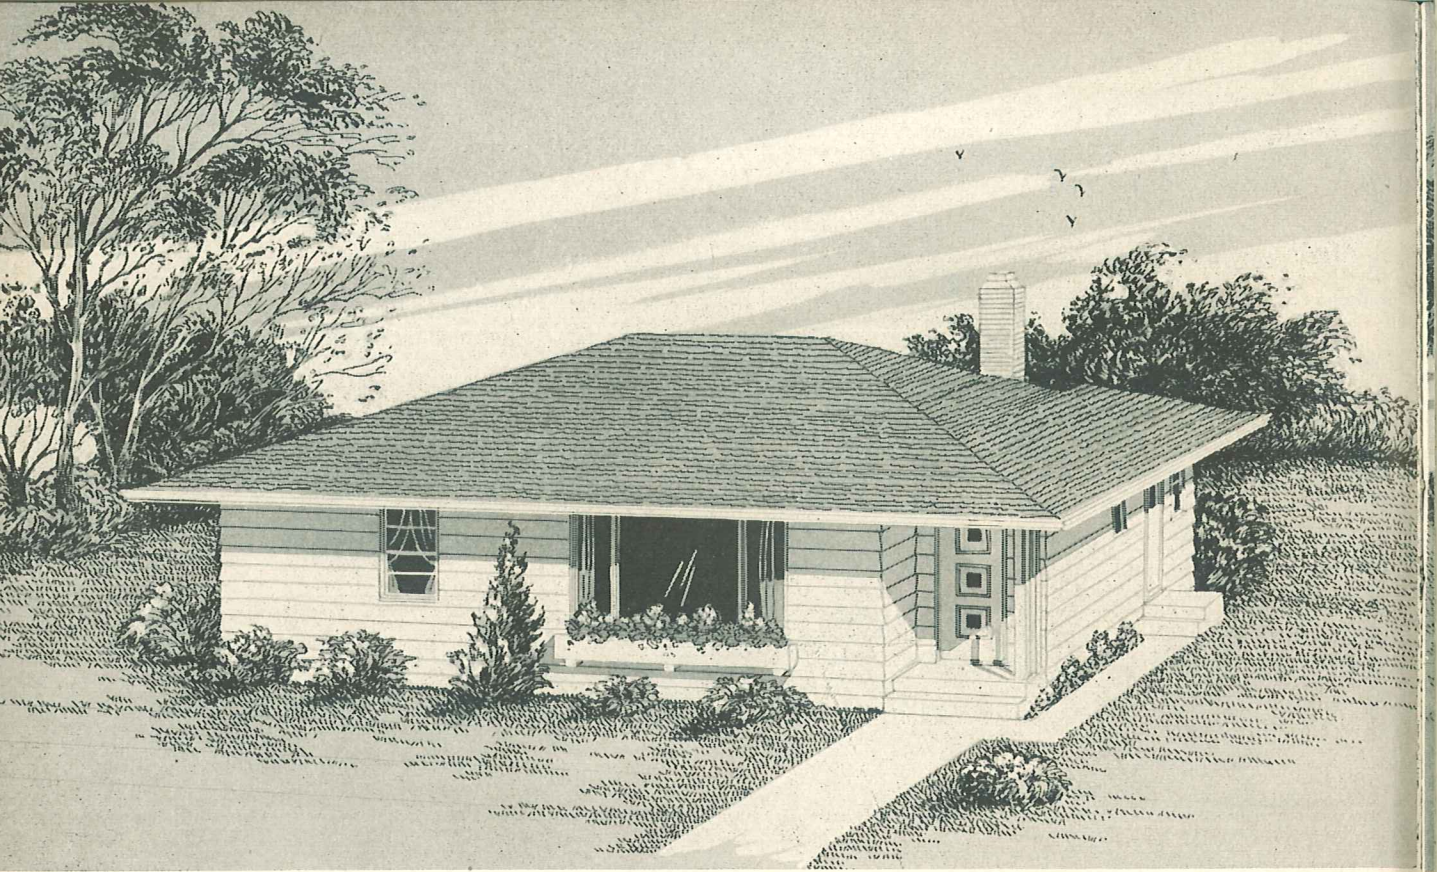

THIS distinctive plan with the attached garage enjoys amazing popularity. The well located service entrance permits three way access to kitchen, basement and garage. Another feature is direct access from kitchen to bedrooms. The front entry is separated from the dining area by a half partition, which may be used as a decorative planting shelf. This attractive but compact, low cost house provides all the essentials for modern living.

Pembroke

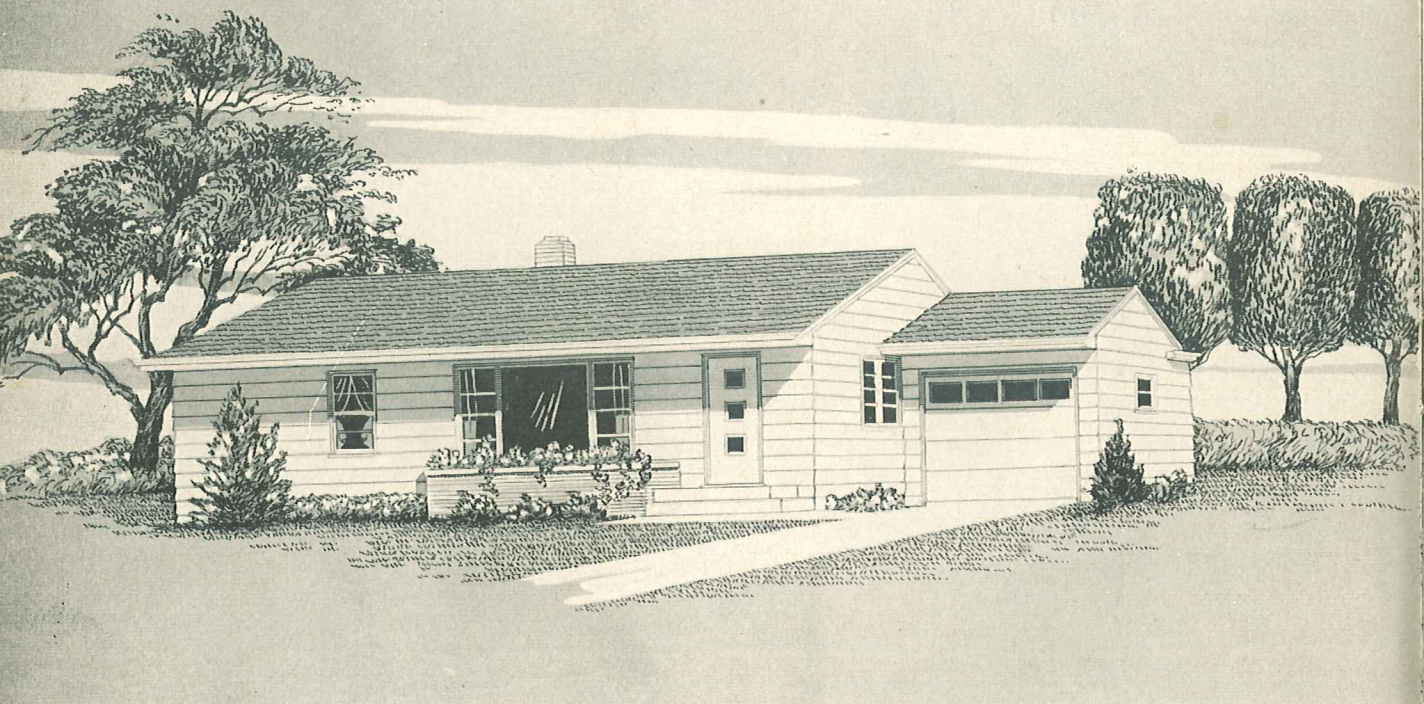

LIVABILITY is the feature that would most nearly describe this house. The combined dining and kitchen area, the side entry coat closet, the large bedroom closets as well as the direct access from kitchen to bedrooms are features not often found in a small house plan. This impressive home was especially designed for the family with a modest income.
